VISITATION DAY TO BE OBSERVED HERE ON SUNDAY

Every Member of Congregational Church Expected to Receive Callers

Captains and workers who will make the annual every-member social visitation for the First Congregational church Sunday afternoon were given their cards and instructions at a supper Friday evening. A number of "pep" talks were given and suggestions made for successfully carrying out this lenten event. All members of the church who are not on the teams are expected to remain at home Sunday afternoon to receive the callers. The slogan will be "a call without a haul." No funds will be solicited, because the purpose of the visitation is to stir up new interest in church attendance and activities.

REMAINS IN CITY
Visitation will be confined within the city limits Sunday, because of the poor condition of the country roads. A rural visitation is to be made Sunday, May 14, when automobiles may be used to reach the country members.

Each person visited will be provided with a card on which he is to fill out a record of his church connections and will be given a chance to plead some forward step in church work, especially by taking up some new activity. Space also is provided on the card to list names of shut-ins needing cheer or pastoral care. Suggestions also are solicited for other work the church might do. The visitation idea has been carried out for several years and has been found to be one of the most effective means of reviving interest in the church. Aged people and invalids who are members but unable to attend services are given a personal contact with the church in this way.

John Sturm, Jr., is bequeathed a farm of about 75 acres and all the personal property on it, except household goods. Joseph is given $5,000 in cash. A grandchild received $5 and all the rest of the property is to be equally divided between the two sons.

DEATHS

MRS. GEORGE D. JOHNSTON
Mrs. George D. Johnston, 55, a former resident of Appleton died suddenly at 10 o'clock Friday morning at her home in Ishpeming, Mich., according to word received by her nephew, W. R. Johnston, 229 Second ave. The body will arrive in Appleton Saturday night or Sunday morning and will be conveyed to the chapel at Riverside cemetery.

Funeral services have not been arranged definitely, but it is expected that they will be held Monday afternoon in the chapel.

Mrs. Johnston was at work in her kitchen when she fell over dead, presumably of heart disease. Her husband preceded her in death 50 years ago in a similar manner when he was stricken at the dinner table. Decedent was a native of Pennsylvania and came to Appleton 50 years ago to make her home. She lived here about 15 years and then moved to Ishpeming. Another nephew, P. M. Johnston of this city, also survives her.

Mrs. G. W. Benton, East Orange, N. J., is visiting at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Elmer Jennings, 559 College ave.

Winter, Back On Job, Breaks Spring Bubbles

Winter has again thwarted the code! Already signs of spring could be seen all around the college and cases of spring fever were developing in many of the students.

Library study periods were turned into committee meetings in which the fellows planned which of their numerous best girls to take to the down river parties. Instead of pondering over their Latin lessons, their thoughts would drift to the numerous activities of spring canoeing, hiking, and H.E.R. Truly, the old saying was again verified that "in the spring the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love."

In the meantime the code was saying farewell to her galoshes and her winter coat as she packed them away with the dream of soon bursting out in the beloved gingham and organ. Already she could hear the cheerful murmur of the serenades waking her from peaceful slumbers and could see her Romeo as he sang beneath her window to the accompaniment of the Hawaiian guitar.

But alas! How vain are all the hopes of men! King Winter came back with a mighty stride and burst all the pretty bubbles. Ruthlessly he covered all the ground with snow and blew his cold breath in the face of the man and the maid. Galoshes and winter coats are again resurrected and instead of the gleeful canoe rides and down river parties the movies will have to provide entertainment for a little while longer.

"IF WINTER COMES" STILL IS LEADING

"If Winter Comes" continues to be in the greatest demand at the Public Library among the books of fiction. Zane Grey's book "To the Last Man" has leaped into prominence as the second best circulator. Of nonfiction works, books on radio communication are still popular.

The five best circulators for the week ending March 18 are:

If Winter Comes—Hutchinson.
To the Last Man—Grey.
Her Father's Daughter—Stratton-Porter.

Queen Victoria—Strachey.
Principles of radio communication—Morecroft.

Haskin Tells How To Patent Clever Ideas

One Appleton man learned during the last week that it is possible to patent even such an intangible thing as an idea. He got this information through the Post-Crescent Information bureau at Washington, D. C., which is directed by Frederic J. Haskin.

He wrote the bureau as follows: "Does anyone get anything for magic tricks? I just invented a few tricks. What does it mean to get a patent and how can I sell it, if it is any good?" In reply he was told: "It is possible to patent clever ideas and tricks and thus protect from imitators in the United States that manufacture games of different kinds or books of tricks might be interested in purchasing your ideas." He was told how and where to get the patent.

The same man asked if he needed a license to go from house to house to get work coloring photographs. Another local man asked where he could obtain information regarding securing a land claim in Canada. He was told to write the Canadian minister of immigration and colonization at Ottawa. High school students asked where they could get small photographs of various authors. They were referred to certain companies which sell photos of this kind.

With the exception of exceptional or special information, anything you want to know can be learned by writing the Post-Crescent Information Bureau at Washington, Frederic J. Haskin, director. No answer can be given to questions entailing an extensive investigation, however.

FARMER SOCIETY CONDEMNS THREAT OF COAL STRIKE

Greenville Grange Says Public Sentiment Should be Against Tieup

Emphatic opposition to the proposed strike of coal miners and railroad workers was voiced at a meeting of the South Greenville Grange recently and resolutions embodying these protests were adopted. The inadvisability of the threatened strikes, detrimental to the welfare of the community and the sufferings sure to follow in their wake were emphasized.

The committee which prepared the resolutions consisted of George R. Schaefer, Charles Haase and Herman Ihde.

Following are the resolutions: "The time has arrived when it seems necessary that the farmers express themselves against the threatened strike of mine workers and railroad employees.

"A possible strike as predicted, by such employees in April, means a shortage of and high priced coal, caused by the mine strikes; food spoiling on the farmers, and famine and suffering in our cities, caused by the railroad strikes.

"We as farmers, all through the war and up to the present time have been faithfully performing our duties through hard work and long hours, having no control of our prices and having no other opportunity to get bigger profits than through the production of maximum crops, while speculative and other productive forces have taken advantage of their opportunity of selling for higher prices and striking for high wages.

"Therefore, we, the members of the Southern Greenville grange, so fit to express ourselves through the public press, seeking thereby to create public sentiment in opposition to the proposed strikes, feeling that no man or set of men in this country can succeed against a united public sentiment.

"We want to vote our protest against any owners or managers of railroads or owners of coal mines, or workmen in either, creating a condition that will stop the progress of our recovery from the terrible scourge of war through which we have just passed. We want it understood that we are in no way to be used to further the interests of either to the disadvantage of the other.

"We are doing our part and it is not unfair for us to demand that both capital and labor do theirs. Whatever differences may exist must be adjusted without stopping the wheels of commerce.

"We feel that it is to the interest of all industries and people that the fighting and war spirit be abolished and capital and labor should use civilized methods in settling their difficulties."

Male Of Species Sent In These Recipes For Candy

All but two of these recipes were sent in by men. Do you suppose they are trying to beat the girls at their own game? Here's your chance girls, to get busy and show the men that you can make better candy with a man's own recipe than he can himself.

The recipe for marshmallows ought to be good, and easy to follow since such explicit directions are given.

FONDANT
1 cup granulated sugar, enough milk to dissolve sugar, perhaps 1/4 cup. Stir on stove till dissolved. Do not let it boil. Remove grains of sugar around edges and spoon. Boil without stirring, try in water, when it makes a firm but not crisp ball, put the pan in cool water until you can bear your fingers in it. Stir and beat at the same time lead until it begins to harden. Put flavor in when it is creamy. To this you can add chopped walnuts, cocoanuts or candied fruits of any sort. Shape fondant into rolls and dip in melted chocolate for chocolate creams.

CALIFORNIA STYLE FRUIT ROLLS
1 cup raisins
1 cup walnuts
1/4 cup crystallized ginger
Shredded coconut
Powdered sugar
Knead on a board dredged with powdered sugar and form into long thin rolls. Coat with coconut and set in a cold place until firm.—George Magnus, 729 Commercial-st.

CHINA TOWN ALMOND SQUARES CALIFORNIA STYLE
1/2 lb. almonds
2 cups sugar
1 cup water
1/4 teaspoon vinegar
4 drops almond extract
1/2 lemon
Blanch almonds and brown lightly in a buttered pan in the oven.

Boil water and sugar 8 minutes add vinegar and boil until brittle when tested in cold water, add extract and pour over almonds, use the half lemon to press candy evenly in the pan, cut in squares before it hardens.—George Magnus, 729 Commercial-st.

PACIFIC SEA FOAM
3 cups light brown sugar
1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar
1 cup water
1 egg white
1/2 cup finely chopped nuts
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
Cook sugar, cream of tartar and water to soft ball stage. Beat white of egg stiff and pour slowly into it the cooked sirup add nuts and flavoring. Beat until thick. Drop by teaspoonful on buttered paper.—George Magnus, 729 Commercial-st.

PEPPERMINT CANDY
Boil 2 cups brown sugar, 1 cup sirup together until it hardens in cold water then add 2 tablespoons butter and a few drops of peppermint flavor. Beat well, turn into buttered tins and mark into squares.—George Magnus, 729 Commercial-st.

CHOCOLATE DROPS
Whites of 2 eggs beaten stiff, add powdered sugar and flavor with vanilla. If preferred add chopped nuts and form into little balls. Put these balls on waxed paper or a butter plate. Then melt a quantity of bitter chocolate as much as preferred, add a few teaspoons of sugar, after it is melted add a small quantity of parowax to give a glossy black look to the chocolate drops. Drop the ball into the melted chocolate with a fork. It is very delicious to place nut kernels on top of chocolate before they are dry. Put on buttered plate and let harden.—Miss Mildred Schuh, Hortonsville.

MARSHMALLOW CANDY
2 large cups of sugar.
1 1/2 large cups of water.
1 envelope of sparkling gelatine or 2 level tablespoons, a good pinch of salt, 2 teaspoons vanilla, put the 2 cups of sugar in a large kettle and add 1 cup of water. Boil this for about 15 minutes or until it threads. Meanwhile soak the gelatine in a half cup of water and let stand until the sugar is cooked enough then turn off gas, and add the soaked gelatine stirring it a little then let this mixture cool until it is hardly lukewarm, then add the pinch of salt and 2 teaspoonsful of vanilla, and beat it with a cake spoon or Dover egg beater for about 15 or 20 minutes or until it is as light as snow, and as thick as very thick whipped cream. Sprinkle the baking board with thick powdered sugar and turn the marshmallow onto it flatten it out with a silver knife until it is about 3/4 of an inch in thickness then sprinkle the top also with powdered sugar, let this stand about 20 minutes then cut in small pieces about 1 inch in squares roll these in powdered sugar again from all sides and they are ready to eat. This mixture makes about 125 pieces. Chopped nuts of any kind may be added just before turning it on the board. They are still more tasty if coated with chocolate.

CHOCOLATE COATING—Cut 2 squares of sweet chocolate in a sauce pan but do not add any water. Soften this over a pan of boiling water put in a lump of butter the size of a small walnut and a lump of parowax same size let this all melt. Then take one piece of marshmallow at a time and dip it in the chocolate put this on wax paper far enough apart so that they do not stick together and press a walnut half on top of each piece and then let them dry.—Mrs. Thomas Welbes, 910 Durkee-st.

LEMON CANDY
1 lb. sugar
1/2 pt. water
1 1/2 teaspoon cream tartar

LIVE AT LAKE TO AVOID HIGH RENTS IN CITY
More than half a dozen families spent the winter at Lake Winnebago and it is said that this number will be doubled next winter as several new cottages are to be built the coming summer which will be constructed for all the year occupancy. Several of the

Man Spends One-Third Of Life In Bed
Did you ever stop to think how much time you spend sleeping, taking off and putting on your clothes?
Well, a bend for figures has it all averaged up so he gives out the information that the average man spends 2 years, of his allotted "three score years and ten," dressing and undressing, and 23 years and 4 months sleeping. The balance of his 70 years of life is spent as follows:
At work, 19 years, 8 months.
At play and prayer, 10 years, 2 months.
Eating and drinking, 6 years, 10 months.
Sick and convalescing, 4 years.
Total, 70 years.

BRITISH POLICY AND BOLSHEVISM

The troubles of Great Britain in South Africa and India have been prominently before the world the last fortnight. As is always the case, when there are flare-ups in these portions of the empire they were greatly exaggerated. The impression was given in the news dispatches from Europe, as well as in their handling by the press, that India was on the verge of a revolution, and that British supremacy in South Africa was imperiled. There were reports which stated that General Smuts would have difficulty in coping with the situation, and visions of another Boer war were painted for the imagination.

Developments of a few days have shown that conditions in India are practically normal, while in South Africa there was nothing more than a locally serious industrial strike. The strike has been called off and has completely repudiated an attempt by revolutionaries to capitalize the trouble into a rebellion.

The most interesting and perhaps the most significant phase of the disturbance is the report of a bolshevik plot to bring about a revolution in conjunction with the strike. These reports say that large sums of money from Russia, together with propagandists in that quarter, had been sent into South Africa to prepare for a blow in behalf of soviet government. It remains to be seen whether the stories are true or whether they are mere inventions.

If they should prove to be true, that is if the British government should officially confirm them, the question would immediately arise by what process of reasoning Great Britain could justify admission of Russia to the economic conference at Genoa and her apparent readiness to recognize the soviet government and to even assist financially a continuance of bolshevism. Would the commercial advantages to be gained by opening up concessions and trade in Russia and by loaning her money offset the great fact that it means the giving of bolshevism a new lease on life and a final opportunity to extend its disrupting and malevolent head into portions of the world which are still in an uncertain state of reaction from the World war?

It is not easy for Americans to comprehend European politics, and particularly the diplomacy of nations like France and Great Britain. Judging them by our standards we see no more reason for British and French participation in the Genoa conference than for our own, and we are quite well satisfied that we are adopting the prudent course in refusing to attend it. We are quite at a loss to understand how the responsible governments of Europe can have anything to do with bolshevism, much less to entertain a policy which actually strengthens it and enables it to carry on just such movements as that which is said to have gained a footing in South Africa.

APPLETON AND THE WATERWAY PROJECT

The Great Lakes to Ocean waterway project should not be a matter of sectional controversy, but inasmuch as sections of the east, particularly New York state and city, are opposing it because of a fancied fear that it will have an evil effect on New York city as the world's greatest seaport and because it may make the Erie canal more nearly useless than it now is, perhaps it is well for the middle west to advance arguments that will show the country that this section and particularly Wisconsin will gain more than the east possibly can lose if the great canal is built. No one will deny that that which will enhance the wealth of so considerable a portion of the United States as the middle west must surely be a good thing for the entire country. The east, or a large portion of it at least, has refused to look at the project in that light, however, and is opposing it almost entirely on the ground that it will work injury to New York.

Now Wisconsin, to fight the enemy with its own weapons, would be justified in advancing arguments to show how its own particular interests will be served by the construction of the great waterway but it is not taking that selfish view. It is convinced that the canal would be a boon to the nation as a whole and is appealing for its support on that ground.

No one will deny that Wisconsin, with all the resources and natural advantages it now has, would be a much more wealthy state if it were on the sea coast. William George Bruce of Milwaukee, long a leader in the agitation for a lakes to ocean waterway, in his address before the Appleton Chamber of Commerce a few evenings ago, said there is no reason why Green Bay, Milwaukee, Racine and other lake shore cities should not be seaports. Mr. Bruce, in effect, said the lakes to ocean waterway will bring the ocean to Wisconsin and give this state all the advantages it would have if it were located on the shores of the Atlantic.

These advantages are not to be passed over lightly. They mean a great deal to Wisconsin and to Appleton. If Appleton's paper mills were located only 30 miles from a seaport it would mean a saving of thousands of dollars annually for them in transportation costs on products imported from and exported to Europe. When the lakes to ocean waterway is completed these Appleton mills will be only 30 miles from a seaport for that is what Green Bay will be. They will have all the advantages of the mills which are located on the Atlantic coast. Ocean going vessels will dock in Green Bay's harbor and products for Appleton can be loaded on cars and shipped here at a tremendous saving over the cost of rail shipment from New York or Buffalo. Every city in the middle west will benefit in the same way but none in a greater measure than Appleton.

Because of the tremendous cost of all rail or rail and water transportation between the middle west and New York, the western farmer finds it almost impossible to sell his grain in foreign markets at a profit and meet competition of other grain producing countries. The lakes to ocean waterway, according to Mr. Bruce, will save 10 cents a bushel in the cost of handling. This saving is sufficient to meet competition in European markets and leave a profit to the grower. Inasmuch as the prosperity of the entire country depends in a large measure on the prosperity of the middle west farmer, this one factor alone should be sufficient to defeat all opposition to the waterway project.

Mr. Bruce said the lakes to ocean canal will bring Europe 325 miles nearer to Appleton. That means Appleton products will actually travel 325 fewer miles to reach Europe than they would if sent by rail to New York and then loaded on boats. The canal, however, means a saving of more than the cost of transportation for 325 miles. It means less cost in handling, it means quicker service, it means that Appleton and the middle west will be able to compete in foreign markets on exactly the same footing as the states and nations actually on the seaboard.

That perhaps is a selfish view of the lakes to ocean waterway project but it makes clear the necessity of everyone in Appleton showing an interest in it. It is not a big abstract proposition for politicians to fight over. It is a matter of vital importance to all of us and deserves our attention and our support. One way to get this outlet to the ocean and the world markets is to work for it and Appleton should by all means join those other middle west cities which have long realized the value of this waterway and work unceasingly for it.

Book Reviews

To recall the book reviews of a decade ago or even of a year ago is to laugh—they are, in the main, so wrong in their estimates of the book under consideration. Now it will not do to dismiss this phenomenon with the explanation that the faulty estimates are due to the incompetence of the reviewers, for such an explanation would be only partially true. Many of the reviewers, for such an explanation would be only partially true. Many of the reviewers have well established and well deserved reputations as literary critics, and some of them hold professorships in universities. Such are at least aware of the canons of criticism and possess the necessary historical background against which they may set the new offering. It is next to impossible to assay the worth of a novel immediately after its publication. Why this is so, it is not easy to say, but it looks much like a stubborn fact. One ventures the opinion that "Miss Lulu Bett" and "Dangerous Ages," and, yes, even Hergesheimer's "Cytherea," all of them more or less acclaimed at present, are doomed to nameless graves in the sea of oblivion.—SIOUX CITY DAILY TRIBUNE (Ind.)

EVERY LITTLE MOVEMENT

"My system" of exercise for the better oxygenation of the cells of the body is just a group of exercises calculated to bring into action the muscles which suffer most by reason of sedentary life. There are probably other groups of exercises taken without apparatus that will do just as much good as the symphony. At the same time there are many systems of exercise that are so-called "work" and require about 15 minutes to do the exercises included in the symphony, and some three minutes more to do the two added movements which I shall describe in due course. I consider this medicine cheap at the price of 20 minutes a day—it is one of very few medicines I take on my own judgment. Should any of my readers care for these exercises I will write and ask me whether they should take this or that medicine their own doctors have prescribed or whether they should undergo this or that treatment their own doctors have advised. So I know some people have a very small regard for health.

The most contemptuous opinion of health I ever heard of was that of a man who employed a physician and permitted the physician to attend him regularly yet insisted that he had no faith in the doctor or his treatment. I don't believe that record has been beaten in human life, the sick mule goes the man one better—the mule had no faith whatever in the veterinarian and wouldn't even call him in, yet the veterinarian cured him. A good many men and women who have attained the age of seventy and self sufficiency, the dangerous age when the intoxication of success goes to the head and makes the little ego swell, loudly maintain that the notion of taking daily exercise is all bosh and that they enjoy excellent health notwithstanding they never think of taking exercise of any kind if they can avoid it. Well, there are all kinds of theories or concepts of health, but the average man who understands as health is only a 70 per cent grade. I have yet to examine a 90 per cent specimen that keeps in the 90 per cent class without taking daily exercise. I don't believe I shall ever find such a specimen. If such there be, I should gladly pay for a chance to examine him.

By spirometry, a method of precision for measuring the capacity of the lungs, it has been found that regular daily physical exercise increases the vital capacity up to 30 per cent above the average of so-called healthy persons, and in cases of heart disease or lung disease the vital capacity is decreased about 30 per cent below the normal.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

MIKE LEX

A friend of mine is laid up with what is called a milk leg. When I told mother she laughed. "Old stuff," quoth she. Is there such a disease? (M. R.)

Answer—Inflammation of the veins of the leg or a septic infection of the connective tissue of the leg, the condition is sometimes called "milk leg." It has no more relation with milk than it has with lemon pop.

I have received a choice lot of coryza germs from some ignorant or careless person. My system is combating these germs successfully so far. I have not developed coryza. There are still a number of germs present, however, eager to multiply. Will wet feet or undue chilling of the body—so called exposure to cold—give these germs the opportunity to multiply to a number sufficient to precipitate an attack of coryza? An answer in your columns will oblige.—(W. S.)

Answer—There is no evidence the germs mind getting their feet wet, but they certainly don't like exposure to cold, as Stefansson, the latest polar explorer tells us. There is no evidence that a person who gets his feet wet or is exposed to chilling becomes more susceptible to any respiratory disease. But how you deduce that you've got the germs and that they are waiting and watching for you to get your feet wet, baffles me.

Louis C. Schmidt returned from a business trip to the northern part of the state. A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Bradford. The Rev. John Paville was to deliver an address at Clintonville on March 30 on "Friend and Foe." W. W. DeLong was preparing plans for a new store at Little Chute for P. A. Glaudemans. Arthur E. Irving was to speak at the Baptist church the following Sunday morning on "The Christian's Reward."

George M. Verity of the class of '95 sent to Lawrence museum a copy of Peking Gazette, one of the oldest papers in the world. The Gazette is the official paper of the Chinese government and the date of the issue sent by Mr. Verity was Oct. 9, 1877.

Reports from Ellis Junction were to the effect that 15,000 trout fry shipped from the state fish hatchery, died in the depot there because of the neglect of the parties to whom they were shipped.

Miss Estelle Taggart of the town of Kaukauna and Charles Breiterick of the town of Ellington were married in the Congregational church at Kaukauna the previous Wednesday by the pastor, the Rev. P. H. Mason.

Many cellars in private houses were flooded the day between in consequence of a heavy downpour of rain.

City Treasurer F. W. Kuttler made his return of the delinquent city taxes to County Treasurer August 28. The list amounted to $10,331.09 against $10,252.88 the previous year.

Three million trout were to be distributed by the Wisconsin fish commission, the lakes of Wisconsin between March 1 and July 1.

The Grand Rapids Reporter said John McNaughton of Appleton visited the Port Edward mill looking after his interests. He expressed gratification at the way things were going.

Resume of American and Foreign Newspaper Opinion

"We Can't Understand America."

Paris.—Most of the French press frankly puzzled by America's attitude toward France. A paper that gives especially clear expression to this is the VICTOIRE, whose editor, Gustave Hervé, says: "After having advised us to modify our reparations demands to the real capacities of Germany, and having thus encouraged her to pay as little as possible, our American friends ask us to decrease our armaments."

"Here again their intentions are excellent and perfectly friendly, it is sure that we should recover more quickly in Europe if we had not such heavy burdens."

"But do our American friends imagine that it is for our pleasure, or for the pleasure of playing at soldiers that we shoulder such heavy burdens, or for conquering Germany territory? The Russian Bolsheviks tell this tale about France; the Germans who have not got over their defeat use it as propaganda, and our French communists and a certain number of opponents in order to play a trick on the government which is not to their taste, chime in, out of pure contrariness."

"But without waiting for our American friends' demands, it happens that we have decided to shorten the length of military service, which before the war was three years, and now is only two, to eighteen months and if possible to twelve months."

"We understand very well," continues M. Hervé, "that a French army of 800,000 men seems exaggerated to our American friends. But they don't seem to know that we have more than 200,000 in Syria, in Morocco, and in the rest of our African possessions, in Madagascar, and in Further India, and that we are only able now to reduce our army in Syria to any extent, and hope soon to be able to do the same in Morocco."

"Our number of soldiers in Europe seems to them excessive compared to the German army reduced to 100,000 men, and to a great extent disarmed."

"Painful as it is for us not to agree with our American friends on this point, we feel obliged to tell them that we consider ourselves better judges of what is really necessary for our safety and for the execution of the treaty."

"There are many Frenchmen among the least chauvinistic and the less pessimistic patriots who consider that unless we have a large army on the Rhine, not only we shall never get a plénipotent of what Germany owes us, but in spite of all the beautiful words of Herr Wirth, but that the military party and the great industrial world soon re-establish the Hohenzollerns—rather that they would have re-established them at the time of the Kapp affair—and that the first thing these reactionaries would do, would be to immediately invade Poland."

"Our American friends may think that we are wrong, and that our fears are exaggerated."

"But a scalded cat fears cold water. When excessive confidence in Germany's pacific character has cost us 1,500,000 men and the devastation of a large part of our territory, and that we should not treat disarmament questions in an off-hand manner."

"Our American friends," says M. Hervé, "allow themselves a navy equal to that of England because of their anxiety with regard to Japan, which is separated from them by the wide expanse of the Pacific, and they fear they feel they are threatened, rightly or wrongly, they don't hesitate to be sure of a numerical superiority of battleships. How can they find it wrong then if we make sure of having a great military superiority over the Germans, as long as the democratic republics do not seem about to get firmly beyond the Rhine and as long as the Germans have not re-constructed our devastated regions?"

"And how can they be surprised if Poland situated as she is between Germany which hates her, and soviet Russia which is hungry, looks twice before she follows the advice about disarming which distant friends may give her, when she has already been dismembered by her near neighbors?"

"We should only be too glad in France to bring about general disarmament in the whole world; we even tried, with this intention, in agreement with certain statesmen, the papers of the refusal of the United States to participate in the gathering called by Italy to consider Europe's economic problems. There is, naturally, a very sharp mixing of politics in the general discussion regarding the wisdom of the Harding decision. Friends and foes of the movement are unanimous in conceding that the action of the United States has eliminated all possibility of the gathering being made a success. Regarding justification, however, opinion seems to vary with the political policy."

The newspaper itself while the great mass of the independent journalists likewise are sharply divided in opinion. But in nearly every instance there is suggested a feeling of wonder regarding what Russia will get out of it.

"The truth is that the conference called to meet in Genoa was in fact projected in London," says the BOSTON TRANSCRIPT, (Ind. Rep.) "its real purpose is to give recognition to Lenin and Trotsky, and to supply a stage upon which the London government can act as introducer of the Lenin-Trotsky outfit to the United States."

States. It is due the President and his cabinet to say that when the question of participating in the conference was put to the cabinet weeks ago the vote was unanimous in favor of the declination."

"Before it seeks friendly relations and economic undertakings with the United States the Government of Russia must insure a play, direct treatment, a Russian opportunity to its own people," is the position of the SYRACUSE (N. Y.) HERALD (Ind.).

The PITTSBURGH PRESS, (Ind.) cannot accept this viewpoint. "The one regrettable paragraph," it says, "is that for the Russian people seems to be still determined to dictate to the Russian people what kind of a government they shall have. How the United States can persist in its hostility to Russia and expect to fare as well in Russian trade relations, is not clear. This portion of Mr. Hughes' note is not in keeping with the clearness and force of the rest of it."

"Normal trade relations are not possible of course," says the ST. LOUIS POST DISPATCH (Ind.) "in the absence of a government which acknowledges its responsibility for protecting the life, civil rights and property of foreign citizens. But this is a problem no more for the American than for the other governments concerned in economic rehabilitation."

The CHARLESTON (W. Va.) DAILY MAIL (Ind. Rep.) insists that "one of the great needs today of Russia is capital and confidence. Under the present regime it does not appear that Russia can obtain either. The outside world would be foolish to put any capital in Russia without confidence in the Russian people or in the government."

That absenteeism may work harm to the United States in this government, the ABILENE (Tex.) GAZETTE (Ind.) says. "The NEWARK (N. J.) EVENING NEWS (Ind.)" if the conference is to deal with Russia would it not be safer for us to be on hand and see that our views on this question are respected?"

Stripping the letter of Secretary Hughes of its diplomatic phraseology," says the CANTON (OHIO) DAILY NEWS (Dem.) it evidently means that the nations of Europe, including Russia, must give more evidence that they are willing to help themselves before the United States will consider a discussion of methods of rehabilitation. Nations still ready to pounce upon each other cannot well be helped until they change their attitude to one of a larger pledge of friendship."

The WASHINGTON EVENING STAR (Ind.) hopes for Europe in the face of the refusal to participate. "There is no good reason why Europe should be disheartened by refusal of this government to participate," it says. Secretary Hughes makes it plain in his note that refusal does not mean a lack of sympathy or unwillingness on the part of the American people to help Europe solve her economic problems, but that it is chiefly because the people of this country are unwilling to be drawn into Europe's political misadventures."

The WHEELING (W. Va.) STAR (Ind.) says: "Inasmuch as the State Department holds so many splendid suggestions for European rehabilitation, why not give a few of them to this country?"

"Until Russia gets sober there is no use trying to talk business with her," says the ABILENE (Tex.) GAZETTE (Ind.), "or to talk business that involves her in any way."

Conceding that there will be a vacant chair at Genoa, the KANSAS CITY JOURNAL (Rep.) explains that "the chair will be vacant because European reconstruction is a matter for Europeans to consider."

New Monster Lizard in Sussex
London.—A new sort of monster lizard was described to the fellows of the Geological Society of London by Dr. C. W. Andrews, says the CHRONICLE.

It is a pleiosaur, the skeleton being found in the Weald clay of Berwick (Sussex) by Mr. Tooth, who has presented the parts to the British Museum. These parts include the back of the skull, some of the vertebrae and the shoulder girdle.

Dr. Andrews told a "Daily Chronicle" representative that this lizard creature was about 8 feet long, and was distinguished by the distinction amongst pleiosaurs that it lived in fresh waters and not in the sea.

MILLIONS OF YEARS OLD
"This specimen lived in England millions of years ago," said Dr. Andrews, and the possession of certain primitive scales suggest that it led a sheltered life."

New Industrial Era

New York—"A new era in industry is beginning in the United States, built on concentration, cooperation and conservation."

Saul Singer, president of the Garment Center Capital, making this statement points to the garment industry to prove it.

Seventy garment manufacturers employing 15,000 people doing an annual business of $120,000,000 are housed in two skyscrapers and are proving Singer's theory of industrial centralization by saving a million dollars a year.

Singer, just 40 this year, and 22 years ago an immigrant boy from Sebastopol, has seen his dream come true. The Garment Center Capital was his idea, a $15,000,000 building venture that was carried through in spite of handicaps and the trade's declaration that it was impossible.

"What garment manufacturers have done any industry or business can do," says Singer. "It is the modern method of industrial economy. Centralization eliminates waste. It prevents drifting and duplication of effort and stimulates competition."

"Cooperation has greatly helped the garment industry weather a period of depression. It has improved working conditions. Eventually it will result in such great saving that the manufacturers can pass the fruits of economy on to the public."

"We haven't any patent on this cooperative scheme. Other manufacturers and wholesalers can do the same thing. It will benefit the business man and benefit the public. It makes possible a pull-together spirit—a growth in five years that under old methods would take 50 years."

Housed in two buildings, one of 23 stories and the other of 17 stories the 70 firms in the Garment Center Capital are saving more than 85 per cent on their fire insurance premiums. They used to pay 55 cents a thousand, Singer said, and now they pay 7 cents.

In compensation insurance they are saving $40,000 a year by reason of cooperative medical aid. There is a hospital on the fourth floor with two doctors and two nurses, a dentist and an oculist. Cooperative welfare work is carried on; there is a club a gymnasium and rest rooms. All are free to employees.

"Our motto is 'One for all and all for one,'" said Singer. "Each business is separate for the 70 firms' manufacture all grades, all classes and all styles of garments for women. But when emergencies arise the cooperative spirit works as it does in a town's chamber of commerce."

"In centralization there is the advantage that show rooms are convenient to buyers. We have established a manufacturing center and a style center. We get cheaper rent and economical production."

"Any industry can reap similar benefits. Anyone can do as we are doing in pooling on a cooperative basis all buying of staples such as paper, twine, accessories, thread, canvas and other sundries."

Singer is the head of Singer Bros., a former president of the Coat, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers Protective Association and during Governor Smith's administration was chairman of the New York State Labor Board.

Q. When did the first Jews come to the United States? C. H. C.
A. There may have been a few Jews here before 1654, but it was in that year that they were definitely allowed to seek asylum in New Netherlands. There was a provision that "Jews shall have permission to sail to and trade in New Netherlands and to live and remain there, provided the poor among them shall not become a burden to the company (Dutch West India Company) or to the community, but be supported by their own nation." This stipulation has been lived up to so faithfully that in 1916, with a Jewish population in New York of more than 1,250,000, there were but 72 pauper Jews in the almshouse on Blackwells Island.

OBSERVE MONDAY AS DAY TO HELP IDLE VETERANS

Kaukauna Employers Urged to Give Preference to Former Service Men

Kaukauna—Monday, March 20 will be nationally observed as American legion employment day, a day on which the efforts of all manufacturers and business men will be directed toward finding jobs for former service men who are out of employment. It is authentically reported that 700,000 former service men are not working and that many of them are in distressed circumstances. In Kaukauna this condition has not been noticeable, but there are a few men here who may be placed at work.

In connection with the national day, Kaukauna post No. 41, is conducting a city wide canvass in order to determine how many veterans still remain in this city and how they are situated. A registering station has been fitted up in the Red Cross rooms and all legion men have been requested to register. Mike Pank, a legion man, will be in charge of the station on Sunday afternoon from 1 to 4 o'clock. His hours Saturday were from 10 to 12 o'clock in the morning, from 1:30 to 5:30 in the afternoon and from 7:15 to 8:30 Saturday evening.

It is desired that every veteran appear and register regardless of whether he is employed. It is expected local employers will come forward with their pledges to give veterans preference to men outside the limits of Kaukauna when they are hiring workmen.

In a proclamation by Mayor C. E. Raught, it was suggested that American Legion employment day also be used to call the congressional and senatorial representatives' attention to the matter of the bonus bill which is now in congress in order, if possible, to secure a speedy passage of the proposed law.

Fraternal Order is Backing Movement to Relieve Distress in Old Age

Kaukauna—At a regular meeting of the Kaukauna Eagles Thursday evening in Eagle hall, most of the time was spent in a discussion of the old age pension which is being sponsored by the national fraternity. A local committee consisting of R. H. McCarty, T. W. Armstrong, C. E. Raught, L. E. Vandenberg and M. H. Niesen has been appointed to work with other committees throughout the country in the hope that the legislature will pass an old age pension law to become effective as early as possible.

Other organizations besides the Eagles have been invited to assist in the movement. The work of the local committee only carries out a detail of the plan prepared at the national convention of Eagles in 1921. MADE IN APPLETON

Here Is Novel Scheme For Renumbering And Renaming City Streets

George T. Richard Suggests That Numerical System of Naming Streets and Avenues Would End Difficulties Here.

A simple system of naming and numbering the streets of Appleton has been evolved by George T. Richard, abstractor and manager of the Outagamie Loan and Title company, after 12 years of intimate knowledge and experience of everything pertaining to city planning.

Every day of those 12 years, Mr. Richard has come in contact with people of the city who are buying or selling city property and 75 per cent of them have demanded to know why Appleton streets have numbers and names in such a way that residents of the city, to say nothing of strangers, would be able to find their way about without difficulty and at the same time be able to talk intelligently about locations.

With this matter being brought daily to his attention Mr. Richard realized that what the city needs is a simple and practical naming and numbering system. This would have to be arranged with an eye to reducing confusion to the minimum and in such a way that any changes made from the present names and numbers would not cause people to be confused in their own town.

EASY TO REMEMBER

Keeping this thought in mind, Mr. Richard set to work. He believes that the system he has worked out is a simple and practical one. It will be extremely easy to learn, he feels, and once it is learned will be easily remembered. After the plan was adopted, it would become practically automatic in people's minds, he believes.

As a basis for this simplified street naming and numbering system, Mr. Richard has selected the intersection of Oneida-st. and College-ave. Even to the stranger visiting Appleton for the first time, this intersection is immediately recognized as the heart of the city.

For this reason it is the logical point from which to measure distance north, south, east and west about the city and is therefore a proper basis from which to begin naming the streets. In the first place, Mr. Richard believes that Oneida-st. and its continuation, College-ave., should have one name throughout its entire length. Instead of having Pearl and Lake-sts., he suggests that the whole street along the car line be known by one name so that the stranger would not be confused. Any one approaching the city from the south naturally follows the car line to College-ave., so that the slight jog to College-ave. has no source of confusion and all should be under one name.

ONE LONG STREET

Oneida-st. would thus divide the city into east and west divisions and College-ave. would divide it into north and south divisions. All east and west streets north of College-ave. would be consecutively numbered as avenues: First-ave., Second-ave., Third-ave., etc. All east and west streets south of College-ave. would be numbered consecutively as streets: First-st., Second-st., etc. This would be the first indication that the city's streets were named systematically. At once, even the stranger would grasp the thought that all numbered streets parallel with College-ave. on the north were avenues and all parallel with College-ave. on the south were streets.

Starting with Oneida-st., all streets parallel with Oneida-st. on the east would be named streets. These would be arranged alphabetically. For instance the names of the first street east of Oneida-st., which is now called Morrison-st., would be given the letter A such as Adams-st. The next one which is now Durkeest-ave., would be given the letter B such as Brown-st. Drows-st. would be changed to a name beginning with the letter C such as Carver-st. The next street east would begin with the letter D such as Dillon-st. Mr. Richard explains that the names used are merely to explain his system.

West of Oneida-st., all north and south streets would bear the name of avenue, again using the alphabet scheme. For instance, Appleton-st.

would be called Alvin-ave. Superior-st. would be called Clark-ave., the next one, Douglas-ave. and so on, bearing in mind that each consecutive name would begin with its proper letter of the alphabet.

RUN OUT OF LETTERS

Here the people would get the idea of alphabetical progression in the names of streets and would be able to find their way without difficulty. There is no danger of exhausting the alphabet, Mr. Richard points out, because the alphabet is now considerably longer than the city extends in blocks either east or west. However, should it ever happen that the alphabet would be exhausted in naming the north and south streets and taking into consideration the development and future growth of the city Mr. Richard has made the provision that in such event the east side of town could continue the system by using the names of the presidents and on the west side the names of the states could begin when the alphabet ended.

The person using the streets would then find that, standing at the intersection of Oneida-st. and College-ave. he would have numbered avenues north of him and numbered streets south of him, named streets east of him and named avenues west of him. Mr. Richard also calls particular attention to the fact that in the same sense that a numbered street would suggest that it was so many blocks from a given point, such as Seventh-st., would be explanatory in itself that it was seven blocks from a given point, a street beginning with the letter F would in itself show that it was six blocks from a given point. In no other street naming system is there found this general conformity and consistency of north and south, east and west streets showing by their names the distance of the location from a given point.

With the naming system thus disposed of, Mr. Richard would number the streets following the rule followed in all large cities where there are 100 numbers to the block. Diverging from the intersection of Oneida-st. and College-ave., north east and south west, the numbers in the first block would be in the one hundreds, the next would be in the two hundreds and so on.

To illustrate this, take two men standing at the corner of Oneida-st. and College-ave. The men are strangers and each one is looking for a different address. The first man wants to go to 200 North Bateman-ave. as named under the new system.

By the fact that it was a named avenue he would know that it lay to the west of him. The word "north" would indicate that it was north of College-ave. The letter "B" at the beginning of the address would tell him that this avenue was only two blocks away. So he would go west on College-ave., two blocks and then turn north on North Bateman-ave.

By the number 200 he would know that the address he sought lay in the second block north of College-ave. The second man also standing at Oneida-st. and College-ave. wants to go to 200 East First-st. Remembering that all numbered streets are south of College-ave. he would know First-st. was south of him. By the word east, he would know he was east of Oneida-st. The word "First" would indicate to him that the street he wanted was the First street south of College-ave. He would therefore go one block south on Oneida-st. and turn east on First-st. By the number 200 he would know that the address he sought was in the third block east of Oneida-st.

In using this system, Mr. Richard shows, the only basic points the citizen would have to bear in mind are: 1. All numbered avenues are north of College-ave. 2. All numbered streets are south of College-ave. 3. All named avenues are west of Oneida-st.

The gang of cattle thieves and politicians who elected good-natured Billy Wingo sheriff of Golden Bar when they thought he was too easy-going to interfere with law-breaking, have suffered a sad awakening.

HAZEL WALTON, whom Billy loves, saves him from being shot from ambush by JACK MURRAY, a member of the gang, but the latter quarrel when Billy refuses to avoid danger by resigning from office.

RAFE TUCKLETON, wealthy cattle-thief, hires DAN SLIKE, professional badman, to kill Billy and TOM WALTON, Hazel's uncle and an honest ranchman.

TOM DRIVER, local judge, and ARTHUR RALE, district attorney, are partners in Tuckleton's scheme. TIP O'GORMAN, another politician, refuses to take part. Billy receives a note signed by Hazel requesting him to come at once to the Walton ranch. He is suspicious and forces Judge Driver to wear his clothes and approach the house on horseback. Billy crawls to a window and sees Tom Walton dead on the floor.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

He continued to stare unblinkingly into the room and after a time he made out the dim lines of another man's figure sitting on the table beside one of the front windows. The head of this other man was turned away from Billy. He was watching the draw through the front window. On account of the soft snow Billy did not hear an approaching horse until it had almost reached the ranch house door. When the horse stopped the man inside the ranch house moved quietly to the door and stood at one side of it. His hand moved to his leg and came away.

The rider dismounted. Billy heard him rattle the latch of the door. "Don't shoot!" he heard him say in an agonized whisper. "Don't shoot, for Gawd's sake!"

Billy, watching at the window, saw the man in the room fling open the door. For an instant the tall and hairless form of Judge Driver showed black against the expanse of snow framed in the doorway. Again came the plea for mercy—a wild cry of "Don't shoot! Don't shoot! It's me! Driver!" as the judge, realizing only too well that any such outcry was tantamount to a confession of guilt, plunged into the room. Obviously his purpose was to escape the fire of the avenging rifles that he had every reason to believe were somewhere in the brush along the draw.

"Thank Gawd! Thank Gawd!" babbled the judge, sinking back against the door. "I thought you'd shoot me!"

"I damn near did," remarked the man, whose voice Billy now recognized as that of a late arrival in town, named Slike. "If you hadn't jerked your hat off so's I could see your face, I would have. When will Wingo get here, and didja get him to come by himself all right? By Gawd, you're wearing his clothes! Where is he?"

"He's here!" gurgled the judge. "Then you did lead him here, damn your soul! You white-livered cur, do you think I'm gonna hang on your account? What did you tell him?" To the accompaniment of a string of most ferocious oaths Slike shook the judge as the terrier shakes the rat.

"How many's he got with him?"

"One—two."

"We'll shoot it out with 'em here, I said. I ain't kicked all the fighting blood out of you, have I? Get the gun off that feller I downed. It's on his leg yet. You can go on the whole fight! It's you or them, remember!"

"Suppose he comes bustin' in the back way?" quavered the judge.

"We'll try to take care of him. But he'll come the other way, I guess."

But Slike guessed wrong, for Billy Wingo, judging that the psychological moment had arrived, showed his gun, hand thrust through a window pane and shouted, "Hands up!"

"You dirty Judas!" yelled Slike and, firing from the hip, he whipped three shots into the judge before he himself fell with four of Billy Wingo's bullets through his shoulder and neck.

Shot through and through, Judge Driver dropped in a huddle and died.

"This," said Rafe Tuckleton, "is a helluva note."

"It's all your fault," the district attorney recriminated bitterly.

"Well, the first part worked all right," protested Rafe Tuckleton. "Dan downed Walton without any trouble. How could I tell Driver would slip up on his part? I'm glad Slike downed him. Served him right for being a fool!"

"How do we know what happened before the fracas at Walton's? We don't. We don't know anything except that Tom Driver is dead, Dan Slike wounded in the caliche, and Skinny Shindle has skeetadded."

"Sh-sh," cautioned Rafe. "Somebody coming—oh, it's you, Tip. I-o."

"Yeah, it's me, Tip," said O'Gorman closing the door carefully. "Look here, Rafe, what did I tell you about downing Tom Walton?"

"I ain't downed Tom Walton," denied Rafe sullenly.

"You had it done," insisted O'Gorman.

"How do you know I did?" dodged Rafe.

"You don't even seem able to obey orders any more," said Tip O'Gorman.

"Go easy, you two," snapped the district attorney, as a dog in the next room began to bark. "There's somebody comin' up the path."

Billy Wingo opened the door and strode without ceremony into the office. He was followed by Riley Tyler. The latter slammed the door behind him and set his back against it.

"I hope you boys are feeling generous tonight," remarked Billy.

"The fact is," went on the calm voice, "I'm takin' up a collection—a collection for Tom Walton's niece, Hazel."

Billy thought that at the mention of the ranchman's name both the district attorney and Tuckleton stiffened their slouching bodies.

"Her uncle's gettin' downed this way will be a bad blow for her. He was all she had. I understand now the girl won't ever know that this is any benefit like. It's insurance on Tom's life, see? How much will you boys give?"

Tip O'Gorman did not hesitate. "You can put us down for a thousand apiece."

"Not a thin dime," contradicted the district attorney. "Whadda you think we are?"

"A couple of rascals," was the prompt reply. "And there's a tax on rascals. That'll give you a thousand apiece."

Billy's voice was earnest. But a sardonic devil looked out of his eyes. "Why—um—yes, yes, of course, I'd always intended to contribute. I was just fooling. Yes."

"By the way," said Billy, staring hard at Rafe Tuckleton. "I wonder if it was any part of Dan Slike's plan to kill Miss Walton, too?"

Rafe's face went wooden. "How should I know?"

"You know that letter from Miss Walton Judge Driver threw in the fire—the one you heard me telling for Gawd's sake!"

"Billy, watching at the window, saw the man in the room fling open the door. For an instant the tall and hairless form of Judge Driver showed black against the expanse of snow framed in the doorway. Again came the plea for mercy—a wild cry of

Maloney Kept His Promise To Hungry Irish

Chicago — Thousands of Chicago Irish stormed Stillson's loop cafe Friday.

The reason: A year ago Jerry Maloney, manager, posted a notice that corned beef and cabbage would be 15 cents a copy on the first St. Patrick's day that Ireland was free.

Proper Beauty Treatment Will Ward Off The Enemy Of Every Woman--Old Age

Fading Looks and Form Cannot Be Taken Passively in These Days of so Many Demands on Women, Noted Beauty Expert Says.

By Elsie Waterbury Morris
New York. — There is one luxury no woman can afford, no matter how wealthy she may be—that is the luxury of old age. In these days, it is not only the inalienable right, but the obligation of every woman to stay young.

A generation or so ago, old age was accepted without challenge. In permitting her waistline to go and her chin to come, a woman did not realize that she was declaring frankly to the world that she was neglecting or overlooking herself. Now we know this is the truth.

In former days gastronomic selections were not always such a personal responsibility as now. If now you haven't the courage to say no when the potatoes are passed around your friends all know it.

Fashion, too, was more considerate then. Long skirts kindly concealed ankles that had entirely given up the straight and narrow idea. And figures some times lied.

The thinning of the hair was accepted with more or less resignation. Teeth were not supposed to last forever. Rosy cheeks were transient joys. In other words, while old age was not obligatory, at least it was optional, and a woman could let herself go and become frankly old if she liked.

Now this is not so. No woman is so sure of her position socially or professionally, that she dares let the world believe she is lagging behind. There are so many others just behind waiting to take her place.

The mother of the family has only recently awakened to the position she occupied as an impression. Business and professional women may have as many complexes as they like within the hidden recesses of their brains, but they must hide the wrinkles that reveal their presence. Father time has been given gently to understand that women's countenances must not be used for time sheets.

No woman in these days dares to slump. She's got to stay in the game and stay young!

There are no beauty secrets that the average intelligent woman cannot learn for herself. A woman can do for herself anything a beauty doctor can do safely if she uses the right materials and works intelligently and according to scientific instructions.

Some women come to my shop for all their facial work, because money is no object to them. Others come in for a diagnosis and learn by a treatment and expert instruction just how to take care of themselves.

It has been interesting to watch women's personal reactions during the business depression that has recently touched so many. Many tell us that since they have found their allowances cut they have curtailed their wardrobes rather than their beauty treatments, because they have found that with a limited amount of money for clothes, it is more necessary than ever before to have their skins right, their eyes clear and their hair in good condition.

For no Parisian gown will conceal poor grooming, while correct personal care will enable one to present a good appearance and give distinction to the simplest frock.

Our appearance is the index to our characters. I believe the time will come when college will teach a girl to take care of the outside of her head as well as the inside. Each helps the other.

I expect to be a business woman the rest of my life, and my two daughters, 11 and 15, are going to be fitted to do something useful by which they may always be independent.

It is for their sakes as well as my own that I will never think of allowing myself the luxury of old age.

TELL JUDGE GRAHAM THEIR STYLE OF HAIRDRESS; HE KNOWS THE REST

JUDGE THOMAS F. GRAHAM AND ACTRESSES PORTRAYING THE HAIR-DRESSING TYPES THAT HE SAYS, TELL THEIR OWN STORY.

San Francisco—It's all "in the way she does her hair!"

Superior Judge Thomas F. Graham, famed divorce court mediator who has won the title of "the great reconciler," has concluded, after a considerable amount of experimentation, that considerable of a woman's character is betrayed by the particular way her locks are arranged.

He finds that he can almost invariably predict the part a woman sitting in his courtroom will play in a particular divorce action.

And here is his general schedule of how the hair betrays the type:

SPIT CURLS—Here is the jazz lady. Chances are the spit curl wasn't in evidence when she started jazzing around, but was acquired as a matter of course. It's to be found about cabarets and wherever the jazz bands play. Inclines to flapperism, lightly and very likely to be the defendant in a divorce action involving incontinency.

BOBBED—Accompanies a short skirt, cigarette, smocks, tan o' shanters, bohemiaism—all so-called "modern girl" sort of thing. Indication of "advanced thought," ultra-modern theories.

MONA LISA—The kind with hair parted trimly in middle and falling in sleek order over the ears. She's the "career hunter"—the lady seeking her soul. Seemingly demure and generally not unlovely.

EAR MUFFS—Likely to have had too much petting and pampering at home. The kind you'd expect to run home to mother if "friend husband" asked her to cook a meal.

MARCEL WAVE—Disposition likely to resemble the hair—that is, artificial, as rigidly set as the curves of the hair and, hence, stubborn, unreasonable, etc.

HAIR DISHEVELED—Runs her house as she fixes her hair. Is likely to throw a dish or bring a rolling pin into play if a man were to complain about her bad housekeeping or her cooking.

Oh, yes—the judge adds—there is a type whose hair is soft and silky and combed without eccentricities; hair that seems to form almost a halo about the head; graceful and womanly.

"Only we don't see her in court very often!" he says.

Polly and Paul--and Paris

Chapter 64—Sweet Bells Out of Tune

BY ZOE BECKLEY

The solitude, the whirling of her thoughts, the thirst for fresh air, at last drove Polly into the street. To see other human beings, to read in their faces their problems and worries, might ease the gnawing of her own.

She stole past the watchful window of the congerie that faced the apartment entrance. She didn't want to be stopped and questioned, or even sympathized with. She could bear no more.

It was between six and seven, and the rich yellow sunset was gilding the streets. Home-going crowds were thronging, in animated talk. In front of the Opera, the marble-railed entrance to the "Metro," Paris subway, was black with people, shoving to get in. Girls in bebies, their impudent short skirts blowing, absurd high heels clicking on the pavement, laughed more loudly than usual. Young men and their sweethearts, hands entwined after the naive Paris manner, seemed uncommonly numerous.

A stab of loneliness came, so acute that Polly almost cried out. With the world about her at the climax of its gaiety, her heart must be laden, her spirit drowned in loneliness.

She walked quickly, not knowing where, nor caring. She stared at things without seeing them, blindly crossed streets that were swarming with traffic—the pushing, pell-mell Paris traffic—till drivers shouted at her and cabmen swore, swearing their taxi at her very heels. She stopped at a window, gazing in, at the wonderment of a youth who tried to figure out why a pretty young woman was looking at pipes and tobacco jars with her eyes full of tears. He spoke to her tentatively, and at her sudden glare, shrugged and passed on.

The "goneness" of hunger at last brought Polly to herself. Duck—and she was far from home. She climbed wearily into a taxi. The chauffeur was a jolly old chap, raggedly, much mended and patched, his enamel top hat a priceless antique, and his red-faced smile so fatherly that Polly longed to bawl upon his shoulder.

"A beautiful night for the holiday!" he said. "All the world shall enjoy himself. You, too, Mademoiselle. 'Neat co' pass'?"

"Out, oui, moi aussi," she made an effort to say it brightly. "Drive quickly, please."

"Certainement," he chuckled. "Monsieur shall not be made to wait." Duck—and she was far from home. She climbed wearily into a taxi. to her flat. What if Paul had not yet come? How could she bear the night? But of course, Paul would—

As the lift stopped at the fifth floor, the door of the apartment banged open, as if by a furious hand, and Paul, with his hat on, dashed out. They almost collided in the little hallway.

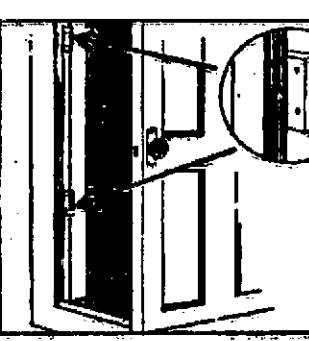

"Good God, so it's you!" The words burst from him. "Where on earth have you been—you've frightened me half to death!"

She drew back, as if struck, looked at him steadily, then burst into a laugh that was like a sob.

"Too bad—for me to have frightened you! What about me, I wonder, me, me, me!" The blaze died from her eyes and she went listlessly into their rooms.

COLLEGE SYSTEM BREEDS IDLERS

Veteran Professor Says Granting of Degrees Is Waste of Time and Money

New York—If you are going to send your boy to college just to get a degree—Don't!

That's the advice of Professor E. J. Sihler, oldest instructor at New York University and one of the foremost classical scholars in America.

"It's just a waste of time and money," he says.

"The granting of degrees is like rubber stamping a mark on a suit of clothes."

The professor knows. He has been active in university life for more than 50 years, here and abroad.

"This practice of marching in solemn procession at graduation time, admired by fond parents and becoming relatives, is all humbug."

For 30 years Professor Sihler has seen New York graduates file past his seminar in the library.

"The whole American college idea is wrong," he says.

"Just because the college student becomes socially independent and autonomous, it doesn't follow that he is also educationally and intellectually self-determining."

"Eighteen-year-old boys are in no position to decide what will be good for them when they are 40—"

"Yet that's just what is assumed in our system of education—the selective system."

"The young man comes here with one decided aptitude—to avoid hard work. The exception is rare."

"Foolishly, our college system allows these lazy, indolent fellows to exercise their own judgment in selecting their courses."

"What's the result?"

"They don't select the work that will do them the most good—but take the easiest courses."

"Such students come out, half-baked, intellectual frauds."

This condition, according to Professor Sihler, exists wherever the selective system is in vogue.

"Slackers dominate our student bodies," he says.

"Instead of coming out developed, students are graduated from colleges with weaker characters. They have spent their four years beating their professors and their courses."

GET MILLIONS BUT WILL KEEP JOBS

Shoe Factory Workers Won't Let $10,000,000 Inheritance Spoil Happiness

(Special to Post-Crescent)
Haverhill, Mass. — Just suppose—You suddenly fell heir to $10,000,000. And that all your life you'd carried your dinner-pail back and forth from a shoe factory every day, wholly dependent on your daily toil for a living. What would you do?

Why, you'd quit work and give a big farewell party for the gang at the factory.

And you'd buy a town house and country house and a flock of motor cars.

And you'd hire an army of servants and get some saddle horses and settle down to enjoy life, wouldn't you?

Well, now, take a look at Patrick Canning and his brother, James, both expert shoemakers for the last 25 years.

They've just inherited $10,000,000 from their great uncle, Major Edward J. Curley, Kentucky distiller king, who died at Monte Carlo.

Are they going to enjoy life? KEEP JOBS

You bet! If keeping on the job at the shoe factory!

And their children are going to stay at work, too!

"I'd far rather make shoes than lead a millionaire's life," says Patrick. "Let me tell you there's a lot of satisfaction in doing a day's work and doing it well."

"I think I may buy a fiver—and again I may not."

"My house needs painting and I may use part of the $10,000,000 to do that."

"My wife's been ailing a bit and I may take a vacation on her account, but it won't be for long."

And Irene, Canning's 21-year-old daughter—does she want to marry a millionaire?

No, she's going to keep on sorting shoe soles!

"I'm quite contented as things are," she says, "and I don't see any reason for quitting work. Maybe I'll get married but I don't care anything about making what they call a brilliant catch."

CONTINUES STUDIES
Canning's two other daughters—Bertha, 8 and Gertrude, 10—will continue their studies in the Haverhill public school.

James Canning, Patrick's brother and co-heir to the fortune, shares Patrick's ideas.

"I'm too old to change my way of living," he says. "Of course, I may play pool a bit in the afternoon and take in the movies of an evening and I'll give my children anything they want."

"But they don't want much. My boy, Fred, works as a shoe cutter and will keep on holding down this job."

"It's better to do something useful in this world than to be idle."

Speed Artist When It Comes To Learning

Norman, Okla. — Grant Spangler, arts and sciences student at the University of Oklahoma, claims the world's record as a speed artist.

At 12 he was graduated from grade school.

In two years he finished a high school course.

In three years he did so through a university course.

At 16 he was in the United States navy and at 17 had been promoted to chief petty officer.

Besides all that, he's saved 23 lives as a life guard.

Spangler's only 19 now.

New York—New York state made $200,000 on the last fiscal year of boxing according to the report of the commission. The receipts were $254,353.50.

Using Old Potatoes

Just at the end of winter potatoes are at their worst. New potatoes are always high when they first come in to market and the old ones are soggy when cooked and hard to pare.

But this vegetable is high in food value and must be included in the spring diet. Use it in soup for luncheon and see how good it is.

POTATO SOUP WITH CHEESE
Two cups thinly sliced potatoes, 1 onion, 1/2 cup diced celery, 4 cups milk, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 egg.

Wash and pare potatoes. Slice into cold water and let stand 15 minutes. Drain. Slice onion. Put onion, potatoes and celery in a smooth sauce pan and pour over cold water to cover.

Let cook until the potatoes are soft. It will take about half an hour. There should be just enough water to prevent burning during cooking, but the water should be all boiled away when the potatoes are done.

Mash the potatoes slightly with a potato masher. Add milk and bring to the boiling point. Do not let boil. Break the egg into a cup and mix slightly with a fork. Do not beat. Stir egg into hot soup. Add butter, season with salt and pepper and serve at once.

This is a delicious and substantial potato soup. If a decided onion flavor is liked use two onions instead of one.

CREAM OF POTATO SOUP
Two large potatoes, 1 quart milk, 1 onion, 3 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon paprika, 1/2 cup tomato catsup.

Wash and pare potatoes. Cut in quarters and boil till tender. Drain and put through a ricer or rub through a sieve. Scald milk with onion. Remove onion and add mashed potatoes. Melt butter and stir in flour. Add milk slowly, stirring constantly. Season with salt and paprika and stir in catsup. Serve at once.

Adventures of the Twins
Olive Roberts Barton

A Queer Forest
Buskins pulled on the rein of the green paper elephant he had been rid- and came to a stop.

Nancy and Nick, coming up behind him, stopped too and sidled off.

Reddy Bounce and Blue Jumper, the fat jolly rubber balloons, arriving just then took charge of Nancy's pink pig and Nick's blue poodle.

"Now," said Buskins, straightening his head, kerchief and pulling up his high boots, which had become unsettled in riding, "I want you to see the balloon nursery. It's here in these woods."

The Twins were all curiosity by this time, for the Land of Lost Balloons was about the queerest place they had ever been in, and wonders were not to cease, to judge from the noise that was coming from the woods where Buskins was leading them, for forest of great rubber-trees like the pictures in the geography books.

But these rubber-trees were different because they bore such queer fruit—balloons, if you please, of all colors and sizes, yes, and shapes, too, for where in the old days rubber balloons were all of one shape and round as marbles, nowadays it's nothing at all for a balloon to look exactly like a large watermelon or a squash, or a string of sausages, and one I know of, my dears, had ears like a rabbit. Every kind of balloon was growing here.

But the noise! All babies were crying.

"It makes them grow," said Buskins. "All the balloon people grow here." He went on, waving a hand. "And the babies are the squawkers."

POTATO SOUP WITH CHEESE

Three cups milk, 1 onion, 1 1/2 cups mashed potato, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon paprika, 1-3 cup grated cheese.

Slice onion and put in milk. Scald and remove onion. Stir potato into milk. Melt butter and stir in flour. Add milk slowly, stirring constantly. Add salt and pepper and cook gently for five minutes. Add cheese and keep hot over hot water until cheese is melted. Serve at once.

If you use an aluminum pan to cook the soup in be sure that the inside is not the least bit discolored. A smooth granite-iron sauce pan is preferable to aluminum. A stained sauce pan will make the soup dark colored and unappetizing.

Fastest Human Beings

LEFT TO RIGHT: CHARLIE PADDOCK, MORRIS KIRKSEY Palo Alto, Cal.—Behold the two fastest human beings in the world, Charlie Paddock, track captain of the University of Southern California, and Morris Kirksey, Stanford's star sprinter.

Kirksey, Stanford's speed merchant, runs the 100 yards in 9.45 seconds. Paddock is credited with having negotiated the distance in 9.25 seconds. His official record is 9.35 seconds.

Which, after this spring, will wear the crown? It is just a matter of inches between them at the tape.

Will Kirksey throw off the jinx and beat Paddock to the tape in their last college race, soon to be staged?

Baseball players at Lawrence college will meet with Coach H. D. McChesney Saturday afternoon in Alexander gymnasium to discuss plans for having a baseball team this year. If enough men at the college want to put a nine in the field and are willing to turn out for practice as soon as the weather permits, the Blue and White will have a team.

Although baseball is not a "Little Five" conference sport, several of the colleges in the organization will have teams and if it is determined at the meeting Saturday that Lawrence will have a baseball club, Coach McChesney will arrange a schedule.

Charbonneau left guard for Green Bay scored the first point of the game on a free throw. Briese retaliated with a basket. A minute later he raised the Appleton score to 3 on a free throw following a technical foul on Hearden. Green Bay's right guard, Prom that time on Appleton led. Zussman shot a basket and followed it immediately with another. Kanouse replaced Briese at forward. Referee Olson called a technical foul on Kanouse for not reporting and Charbonneau scored a free throw.

HOW TO TAKE $150.00 OFF THE PRICE OF A

TOURING CAR

Use three plain main bearings instead of four bronzed backed bearings. Lubricate valves with an oil can. Partially surround the cylinders and valves with water instead of entirely. Use two cast-iron cam shaft bearings instead of four large bronze bearings. Use iron pistons instead of aluminum alloy. Use solid metal cam gear instead of fabricated material.

Try to balance the crank shaft in a lathe instead of actually balancing it in an Olson Testing Machine.

Use ordinary piston rings instead of the Special REO style.

Ream or roll cylinders instead of grinding them.

Use plain valve guides instead of bronze graphite impregnated type.

Use the ordinary type of exhaust manifold instead of working out the air passages scientifically.

The REO T-6 Motor is practically hand built out of standardized parts and we don't hesitate to say that the parts are more thoroughly inspected and the motors more rigidly tested than any other motor being used today in a car under $4,000. If REO made nothing but motors the T-6 motor would be the most featured and demanded of all motors by assemblers. You can say the very same thing of our steering gear, transmission, axle or, in fact, any unit of the construction.

Pittston, Pa. — Frankie Farmer, heavyweight, knocked out Carl Daner of New Jersey, in the second round.

QUERIES

With a runner on first, the batsman hits a ground ball to the second baseman. The ball bounds out of the second baseman's glove and strikes the runner, who is traveling at full speed. The ball is deflected into the outfield, and the runner on first goes to third and the batsman reaches second on the play. Have the runners such a right or is the runner who deflected the ball into the outfield out for so doing?

After the fielder had a chance to make a play on the ball and muffed it up, no attention is paid to the fact that it hit the runner. The ball was in play. If in the opinion of the umpire the runner did not purposely interfere with the ball, the runners have a perfect right to advance at their peril and were entitled to go to second and third as happened.

Ty Cobb says that the addition of Peckinpaugh makes the Washington club a strong pennant contender.
